EVENING DISCUSSION:

TOPIC: The Projected Resource Environment for Intelligence

BACKGROUND: It is clear that the resource environment within which the Intelligence Community must operate over the next few years will differ from that which has prevailed in the first half of the decade. A discussion of the projected environment will set the tone for the conference and provide a backdrop for the subsequent sessions on other substantive topics. Among subjects that should be raised in the resource discussion are: the source of investment pressures; the constraints likely to be proposed; and the need for exacting tradeoffs within the baseline levels. [REDACTED]

25X1

A further subject which should be discussed is the interrelationships which are developing between the DCI and DoD on the budget process. This would result in a better appreciation by the attendees of the manner in which the NFIP/Defense process will be accomplished in the future; it would also sharpen awareness of how decisionmaking will likely occur, and generally raise the level of consciousness with respect to the approach to development of the NFIP. In a similar vein, the question of adoption of a two-year budget cycle by the Congress (a Senate Armed Services Committee bill) should be raised to stimulate thinking and reaction. [REDACTED]

25X1

DISCUSSION: The DCI will lead a one-hour discussion on the first evening. The format will be a discussion framework, with no particular issue to be resolved, but rather a fostering of an appreciation for the anticipated resource environment. [REDACTED]

TOPIC: Counterterrorism: Requirements and Capabilities

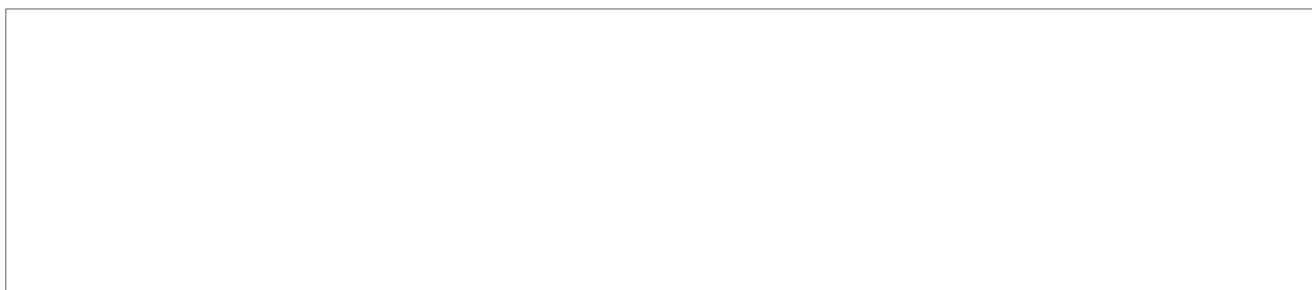

25X1

BACKGROUND: Because the United States has become a primary terrorist target (one out of every four acts of terrorism last year was directed against the United States), the US government is devoting significant effort and resources to developing an effective US counterterrorist capability.

25X1

We have established a National Intelligence Officer for Counterterrorism and a quick-reaction Incident Response Team. We have also instituted incident management improvements, increased intelligence exchanges with foreign security services, improvement in collection management and counterterrorism analysis, and additional training courses on counterterrorism.

Terrorism is a long-term threat and, as its capabilities and scope continue to grow, the problem of combating it becomes ever more complex. Given these increasing challenges, it is vital that the Intelligence Community investigate all reasonable avenues for improving our counterterrorism capability.

25X1

DISCUSSION: The discussion will be opened with a briefing by Mr. Charles Allen, NIO for Counterterrorism.

AFTERNOON SESSION:

TOPIC: Future Directions for Command, Control, Communications and Intelligence (C³I)

BACKGROUND: The Command, Control, and Communications (C³) community has been experiencing very significant growth. Further expansion is planned. An appreciation of the magnitude and direction of that growth from the perspective of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for C³I is warranted to ensure a common understanding among Program Managers. A related question which should be pursued is whether the C³ and Intelligence Communities will be fully compatible in the 1990 time frame. Particular emphasis in this consideration should be placed on the communications issue. The resource implications and investment decisions associated with C³I matters will be central concerns of NFIP development in the coming years. A full airing of the relationship between C³ and Intelligence is therefore crucial for an understanding of the resource environment the Intelligence Community faces. In that context an appreciation of the perspective of the ASD, C³I is particularly important.

25X1

DISCUSSION: Assistant Secretary Latham will open the session with an overview briefing of plans and programs under his purview. This will be followed by a discussion of the implications for the NFIP of the current and coming changes in C³ capabilities. Discussion of this topic will provide a common base of knowledge on C³I plans and programs, and allow concerns of individual Program Managers to be voiced.
